Crossword Page-a-Day Notepad And 2015 Calendar

Synopsis

Stay organized and stay challenged throughout the year. A practical lined notepad, a mouse pad, and daily crossword all in one, the Crossword Page-a-Day Notepad and Calendar is functional, fun, and an indispensable calendar for crossword fans. The puzzles, written by veteran New York Times and Washington Post puzzle writer Fred Piscop, are designed to be tough enough, but solvable in just a few minutes. It's the perfect way to jump-start your brain each day.

Customer Reviews

The puzzles on here are good, and the whole calendar seems like it's a good value. My one complaint (but I could have realized this if I paid more careful attention to the description) is that the pages are bigger than I thought so it's a little clunky to carry around with me. However, that probably does make it easier to actually do the puzzles and have them be easy to read.

If you're not an expert and just trying to exercise your mind for a break (or several), this is great for to-do lists and quick notes for the day. A little tall at the start of the year but it quickly becomes manageable.

As it is the fourth of January, I can only give a limited review of this calendar. The crosswords are very challenging without being impossible. Plus, if you get stuck, the answer is printed on the next day. The back of each day is also lined for extra notes that would not fit on the front.

I bought this as a gift for my senior mother. She absolutely loves the daily crossword puzzles with its separate place to write her daily to-do list and notes.

Not easy, but still makes you think, so just right for me

I have become addicted to this product. I completed last year's in record time and ordered another copy since the 2015 wasn't available yet. Mary Jane Edwards

Love this calendar! I use it at work to make lists of what needs to get done for the day, and then get to do the crossword when list is finished.

Great for crosswords solvers. I do the daily puzzle first thing each morning . . . helps me get awake.
