I've purchased three of the books in this series, one for each of our children for our upcoming trip. Of the three (Kid's Road Atlas, Are We There Yet, and the Best Travel Activity Book Ever), this one is the most like a coloring book (basic black and white pages) and the thickest (most pages). Highlights: *Lots of dot-to-dot--some color by number, mazes, spot the differences, drawing, and puzzles that answer a riddle. The book would be good for 5 and up....some reading skills (or someone helping who can read) would be required for parts. *This book would work for a broad variety of ages...my five-year old would need some help, but would enjoy it, some parts would be too simplistic for my 7 and 9 year olds, though they would enjoy other parts. Probably best for 5-7 I'd say. *Crayons required...not just pencil. *Good value for the $...more engaging than just a plain old coloring book. Some educational value in there...but mostly just fun.

Our 5 yr old loved this activity book. It kept her busy on an eight hour road trip. She never wanted the dvd player on.

We drove 20 hours to Texas with a 5 and 10 year old - they watched DVDs played nintendo and also completed EVERY single page in this book and were sad to reach the end. Best money ever spent on an activity book. Book is fairly thick - maybe 50 pages - puzzles were to hard for 5 year old without help.

This is a good buy for young children. I was impressed with the variety. But many 8 year olds will find it too simple. For kids getting tired of coloring books, you might want to look into a Klutz book or something more exciting.

My 5 year old daughter was mesmerized by this book on a 5 hour plane ride - highly recommended.

This kept my 5 and 7 year olds busy for part of a long car ride...nice selection of things to do.

Ok it's official, this book rocks. I'm a single mom of a 3 year old boy; we're just wrapping up a 6-week trip to Iceland & Kenya. We're now at the end of our trip and this book has held my VERY ACTIVE son's attention pretty much the entire (very hectic) trip, and he still has loads of pages to go. He even tore out many pages with kid friends along the way and the book is still going strong. He loves mazes and matching, and there are tons of those in the book. Along with all sorts of coloring games. It's truly remarkable. He also asks me about the instructions on each page, so he understands how each game works. Just make sure you have a good supply of crayons with you (Crayola Twisters are our fav). Note we even left the book behind by accident at a friend's upcountry house and I had her courier it to our beach house because he was missing it so much!

I bought this for my 5 year old grandson for an upcoming trip he was taking with his parents. The only problem was that his mother called me, and he liked it so much that he finished it before the trip. I guess I'll have to buy him more of this series!
