Customer Reviews

The back of the book says it's for ages 3 & up, but my 8-month old absolutely loves this book already. I like how the pictures aren't cartoonish drawings, but real pictures of animals, and the sounds are life-like. Yet, the book is still really cute and fun! The textures of each animal are all nice and different from each other too. The cow has soft black fur that you push to hear it "Moooooooo," the lamb has a wooly coat that you push to hear it "Baaaaaa," etc. We also have the "Noisy Trucks" version of these books and love that one too! These are books that my baby will enjoy for years, and they're educational as well. I just wish they made more of these types of books.

This book has the following farm animals with textures and their sounds: cow, rooster, pig, lamb, horse. My one-year-old loves to touch the animals and hear their sounds over and over, the rooster is particularly hard to push to make the sound so I have to push it for him though. The rest of the buttons are not as hard to push, but they won't go off with just barely touching them, which is good if you don't want your kids to drive you crazy all day.

A bright colorful book with real images! I really like that it shows you each animal/sound and then on the final page, you can see all the animals in the book together and hear all their different sounds with one push. The little kids that I work with are excited to name the animals, touch them, hear the different animal sounds, and turn the pages to find more animals. Unfortunately all the inner pages are very thin and I am afraid they won't last as long as those of a traditional board book. The kids also frequently attempt to turn 2 to 4 pages at once because the pages are so thin. The final page, in comparison, is VERY fat and all my young clients are confused by this, and always try and turn more pages when the book is actually finished. The buttons in this book are hard to push in comparison to other books with sound that I have. My younger clients (2-3 yrs) need some assistance with pushing the buttons and finding the exact spot to push to yield a sound. Some kids get frustrated when they can't find the exact spot and just want to put the book away. For kids with really small hands who are motivated, it helps to have them push with a thumb instead of a pointer finger. Despite the thin pages and tricky buttons, my clients do really enjoy this book and are excited when they see it, so I think the book is worth it overall.

My 7 months old daughter love it (so I love it too). Big images and the sounds are pretty good. I'll definitely recommend it.

My 11-month-old loves this book! There is so much to do - you can feel and press the buttons - this is a great book for little ones.

My mother-in-law purchased this for my then 20-month-old to enjoy on a long drive. He loves animals and making noise, but this book never really held his attention for more than a minute or two at a time. I think if he'd been 6 or so months younger, he would have been much more excited about it as that was when he liked the other "touch" books we have. But I won't knock it much for his lack of interest as it is a good quality book and the sounds are real animal sounds (versus a person saying "The cow says 'moo' as some toys do). Actually, my dog walked over the book one day and made the rooster sound and I honestly thought my neighbor's rooster had somehow gotten into my house. :)

This book is enjoyed by my 2 year old nephew. He likes the tactile "touch" options within this book for both the touch and sound made. I gave this as a Christmas present 2015 and now several months later he still gets it out when I come over. Its hard to review a child's book other than how they like it, as well as how its condition has maintained under the child's use. This one has stood up. Some pages are kind of bashed up but the noises still function.

My 8 month old enjoys this book in her collection. I love that the Touch and Feel parts are really noticeable so that whenever we turn the page, my daughter sees where to touch. When you push on that spot, the animal's sound plays too. It features real photos and information of five farm animals with their babies. At the end, the "sixth sound" is all of the animal noises in a row to see if the child can guess which one they are hearing.
